Speech by Wireless.

The transmission of the human voice from New York to California, suggesting the likelihood that we may soon be talking by wireless to the capitals of Europe and the Orient, adds a new stroke of magic to the wizardry of electrical science. When radio-communication began its appliances were of the crudest. Electrical oscillations "pumped" into the ether could be received only with the aid of a "coherer" filled with fine metallic filings, and the instrument had to be tapped frequently to restore it to condition after being used. An improvement in working speed was gained by introducing a telephone into the circuit, and by replacing the coherer with a "detector." But there was as yet nothing like speech. Letters of the alphabet were represented by combinations of long and short sounds—faint buzzes of variable duration, all of them regulated in accordance with a fixed code such as is employed in ordinary telegraphy. It is this kind of telephonic supplement to wireless which makes possible the call sent out by vessels at sea in distress—three short sounds, three long ones, followed by three others like the first. This also is the method in use for the thousands of messages which daily issue from radio-stations, public and private. In the newest application of it to wireless the telephone resumes its natural function—figures no longer as an instrument for buzzing mere sounds in response to electrical disturbances, but as an actual carrier of the human voice. Hitherto its range in this respect has been limited, and the extension of that range to something like 3,000 miles, involving the overcoming of enormous technical difficulties, seems to forecast important changes in our present methods of both land and trans-oceanic communication. An earlier age than ours regarded telegrams "sent along the wire" as something wonderful. We have surely reached the age of prodigies when we can infinitely outdo the feat of "putting a giraffe round about the earth in forty minutes" by simply speaking into the ether.—Boston Herald.

"Amerino," a disciple of Mesmer, who is performing this week at the Barre opera house, attracted considerable attention yesterday afternoon by putting a man in slumber land in one of the display windows at the Royal billiard academy.

Fred H. Smith of Boston, a former member of the Barre fire department, arrived in the city this morning with Mrs. Smith for a visit at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Bugbee of Washington street. Before returning to Boston, they will visit Mr. Smith's father in northern Vermont.

Mrs. A. G. Fleury of Swanton, who has been passing several days in the city as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Minard of Highland avenue, left this forenoon for Boston. She was accompanied by her son, Herbert Fleury, who has been visiting in the city for a few days. Mr. Fleury is employed in the Boston office of the Eastern Steamships Co., and his mother will pass the winter with him.

W. H. Wright of New York City, an advance representative of the company playing "Everywoman," which is to be presented in the opera house on the evening of Oct. 15, arrived in the city this morning. Two special cars are required to carry the scenery for the production and there are 150 people in the company, including an orchestra of 22 pieces. The company will arrive in Barre from St. Johnsbury Friday morning and after the piece is presented here the players go to Burlington and thence to Plattsburg, N. Y.

Members of the men's club of the First Presbyterian church are planning to hold a reception in the church vestry on the evening of Monday, Oct. 18, in honor of Rev. William C. McIntyre of Ogdensburg, N. Y., a former pastor of the local church, who is to occupy the Presbyterian pulpit in Barre on the morning of Oct. 17. The ladies' aid society of the church will join with the men in giving the former pastor a welcome to this city. Rev. Edgar Crossland, the present pastor, plans to preach in the Ogdensburg Presbyterian church while Rev. Mr. McIntyre is in Barre. In company with Donald Smith, Rev. and Mrs. Crossland will leave Barre in the middle of next week on a trip to northern New York.

Miss Faustina Maker has returned to her home in this city, after serving as night superintendent at the Mary Fletcher hospital in Burlington since June 1.

Judge H. W. Scott and Mrs. Scott, who have been absent on an extended western trip, in the course of which the judge acted as one of the Vermont delegates at the Odd Fellows' grand encampment in San Francisco, are expected to arrive in the city to-morrow, their trip having been curtailed on account of the illness of their daughter, whose condition was reported to be more favorable to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hutchins, who were married in Manchester, N. H., last week, were given a royal reception at their apartments in the Morse block last night, when more than 30 employees of Smith & Cummings with their wives and other invited guests gathered to welcome them home. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins were taken completely by surprise, but their hospitality was none the less agreeable, once they learned the true nature of the visit. On of the pleasant features of a most enjoyable evening came when E. C. Cummings, speaking in behalf of the guests, presented Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins a purse of gold. Both responded fittingly. Dainty refreshments were served before the visitors were permitted to depart. Mr. Hutchins is employed in the meat department at the Smith & Cummings store and is the son of George Hutchins of East Barre.

Over 1,000 people attended the auction sale at the C. M. Clark estate farm in Plainfield yesterday, and at noon more than 600 of that number participated in a luncheon that required 1,500 crackers and 70 pounds of cheese. Following a policy which he has pursued from the beginning of his auctioneering career, D. A. Perry of this city refused to adjourn the sale on account of rain and the attendance throughout the day amply justified his course. The farm, one of the best realities of its kind in central Vermont, was sold to William Turney of Montpelier for $6,700, the purchase being made for investment purposes. Cows brought from $30 to $81, and 11 horses sold at prices ranging from $30 to $187. Oats brought 50 cents per bushel, and barley sold at 67½ cents. Sixty tons of hay were sold to A. Tomas of Barre at $12 the ton. All told, more than 50 head of cattle passed down the lane leading to the auction block. A drizzling rain did not serve to cool the ardor of the crowd, and the bidding was brisk at all hours.
